Carolyn Morrow Long undertakes here a detailed review of the documented facts of the life of Marie Laveau, celebrated in local lore as a powerful priestess of the Voodoo cult, and offers reflections on her successor, “Marie II. “. Limitations of sources make this a daunting task. Laveau was illiterate, and, apart from parish and municipal records, only indirect and often biased sources are available—journalistic accounts, popular histories, oral folklore, fictionalized reconstructions ...

The Voodoo Spiritual Temple and Cultural Center’s mission is: to provide service that meets the needs of all mankind, which allows him/her to fulfill their quest in the divine plan of the universe. The Temple was established in 1990 by Priestess Miriam Chamani and her husband Priest Oswan Chamani. It is the only “formally” established Spiritual Temple with a focus on traditional West African spiritual and herbal healing practices currently existing in New Orleans.
