London: The Selden Map and the Making of a Global City ...

London 's success, Robert K. Batchelor argues, lies not just with the well-documented rise of Atlantic settlements, markets, and economies. Using his discovery of a network of Chinese merchant shipping routes on John Selden 's map of China as his jumping-off point, Batchelor reveals how London also flourished because of its many encounters, engagements, and exchanges with East Asian trading ...

The map, thought to date from the 1620s, arrived at the Bodleian in 1659 with the bequest of the London jurist and legal theorist John Selden, enriching one of the earliest collections of Chinese material in England at the time.

Bodleian Libraries | Selden Map

London: The Selden Map and the Making of a Global City, 1549 – 1689 argues that encounters with the Ming and Mogul trading systems played a fundamental role in early modern London's cultural, intellectual, and political formation. Through engaging with their counterparts in the South China Sea and Indian Ocean, English merchants discovered not only new sources of wealth but also new models of
