The Messerschmitt Bf 109 is a German World War II fighter aircraft that was, along with the Focke-Wulf Fw 190, the backbone of the Luftwaffe's fighter force. The Bf 109 first saw operational service in 1937 during the Spanish Civil War and was still in service at the dawn of the jet age at the end of World War II in 1945. [3]

Note: according to the British test pilot Captain Eric Brown the P-51 B Mustang  had no difficulty in out-turning the Messerschmitt  Bf 109 G-6. Walter Eichhorn states quite the contrary. In his evaluation the Bf 109 G-6 was  clearly superior in turning  compared to a P-51 D, which is very similar to the P-51 B.
Both generally accepted experts flew the above-mentioned aircraft personally and extensively.

A direct upgrade of the Bf 109 F, the Bf 109 G boasts two things: a powerful 30mm autocannon and a powerful engine. The Bf 109 G is incredibly fast and has great altitude performance, in addition to being able to climb and dive rapidly. Like the Bf 109 F, however, the Bf 109 G has a limited arsenal of guns leading to a distinct playstyle.
