Nongovernmental organisations (NGOs)

have come to play a major role in contemporary governance systems, and particularly in the fields of water and the environment. Engagement of civil society is a key aspect of water governance, and rules and norms can shape this engagement. There are many studies discussing the way civil society actors attempt to influence rules and norms (Betsill and Corell 2008; Finnemore and Sikkink 1998; Brown et al.
