~~Tamsin (novel) - Wikipedia~~
Peter Soyer Beagle (born April 20, 1939) is an American novelist and screenwriter, especially of fantasy fiction. His best-known work is The Last Unicorn (1968), a fantasy novel he wrote in his twenties, which Locus subscribers voted the number five "All-Time Best Fantasy Novel" in 1987. During the last twenty-five years he has won several literary awards, including a World Fantasy Award for ...

~~Peter S. Beagle - Wikipedia~~
Peter S. Beagle is in fine form again and has produced a wonderful Young Adult novel, quite suitable for us older adults who still dream and respect elder thickets. Tamsin belongs on the shelf next to Susan Cooper and Madeleine L'Engle, perhaps a little closer to the adult section because of the tolerance needed for his protagonist's initial 13-year old self-centered whine.

Peter S. Beagle, quote from Tamsin " You don't have to believe in Hell. All you need is to hear someone who really does, who believes in it this minute, today, the way people believe in 1685 — all you have to do is see his face, his voice when he says the word... and then you know that anyone who can imagine Hell has the power to make it real for other people. "

~~9+ quotes from Tamsin by Peter S. Beagle~~
" This creature is the Pooka. Pay no mind to the shape he wears, for he ' s none of his own, and no soul either. Ware him ever, trust him never, but when the wind ' s right he has his uses. Never forget that you will never know him. The Pooka ' s mystery even to the Pooka. " Peter S. Beagle, Tamsin
