Slavoj Žižek[is Seven Veils of Fantasy. In the first chapter of his book [The Plague of Fantasies]Žižek, like Baudrillard, presents a daunting concept to grasp. He begins with a strong and catchy phrase [the truth is out there.] reminiscent of Baudrillard[is haunting [the simulacrum is true.]. I think Žižekis implying that fantasy can never properly describe reality, however if one scrutinizes it close enough, one can discover the reality that fantasy is trying to hide.
