Martin Amis' "The Zone of interest" is a dark, disturbing satire on the banality and casual nature of evil brutality. Set in a Nazi concentration camp in Poland, the story is alternately narrated by 3 characters, the scheming womanizing Golo Thomsen, the "Sodernkommandofuher" or collaborating prisoner Szmul, and the sadistic camp commandant Paul Doll.

Martin Amis' 2013 novel, THE ZONE OF INTEREST, is unlike any piece of art I've been immersed in. While I am more pop culture historian than Rhodes Scholar, I do feel that my knowledge of Holocaust stories is quite high, but for Amis, an English author, to tell the three interwoven stories of Thomsen, Doll and Szmul from the perspective of the camps is quite the ambitious project.
